"Way Town East" for seven months crowded the Manhattan theater, New York, the New York Academy of Mosfe (the largest seating capacity of any theater in America), it was given for 437 consecutive times. It has been independ by all chases of people, seems possessed of a special function for women, and is in receipt of sethusiastic reales from clergymen, school teachers, and, in fact, many people who are not theater-more as a rule. It is a play of rural New England, bringing to the fore in a quaint manner the types of character which exist only in the designs where those scenario depicted. Many have likened it to "Shore Acres" and "The Old Homestead," and declared it superior to either. The moral it teaches is not hung up like a significant, but is left for the auditor to deduce with a district that he enjoy the methods which lend to conclusions. Customs and speech are reproduced without exaggeration, characters are individualized, and so for as appearances, manner and address are concerned, it is said they might be transferred to any opinion of the region where the scene is laid, without exciting remark. The scenery is complete, presenting a series of heautiful pictures, and it is claimed there are many realistic touches which show familiarity with country life. There is a seem storm in the third act, an invention of Mr. Jeseph Grismer's, said to be the most realistic ever presented on any stage. Every role has been possibling fitted to the character, while all the mechanical effects, the appartenances and the calculated and large chair that tended to make the Metropolitan production a success are retained and will be given identically the same.

The story is simply told. An old former who has a son, designed by the father to marry his country, the young people do not care for each other, the girl falling in love with a butterny-hunting profession, while the young man is smitten with a mysterious girl whe strays into the family as a servent, although it is guilt obvious she is of a higher station in life. Later it appears she has been deceived by a mock marriage, her betrayer being a rich young fellow who is now trying to marry the commin. Just at the time when the sen declared his love, his father goes away to follow up some rumous relative to the miri his son loves. Discovering their truthfulness, he returns and drives her from the house. This is the strong epirode of the play. All the characters of the story are upon the scene and when the stern old countryman orders the heatened woman out into the snow, his son declares he will accompany her; then comes the old man's bitter denunciation of the girl, of her admission of her guilt, and finally her statement that the man who is responsible for her betraral is an homered given in the house. As the points him out, his very manner betraying guilt, all the other personages from sleety form besecking her to remain. The girl's indignation is great, and she dashes out told the snew, the sen following the wronged woman, the love of whom fills his heart.

Of course there is a happy stding.

Where is a most deal of resistable for in "'Way Down East," as well as the serious interest attendant upon the pa-thetic story of the heroine. The company sugged by Manager William A. Brady for "'Way Down East" is epiken of as being one of the strongest fraveling on the road this season.

Notwithstanding the cloudy weather, our opening was a grand success. In fact, it was far beyond our expectations. We feel very thankful to the public for the way they turned out to our opening and hope, by our straight forward and up-to-date business methods, to merit a continuance of the acquaintance of the hundreds who were so kind as to visit our store, and to those who could not find the opportunity to call.
